THE HERO OF THE HUNTER.—The Eastern Morning News records the funeral, at Hill, of John Ellertorp, "The Hero of the Hunter," and says it may be questioned whether his career has any individual spangled in the world's history. The savior of forty lives from drowning during sixty-one years' existence could not fail to be exalted to the position of a great hero, and worship which was paid to his heroism assumed no exaggerated form, though it was intense and abiding. He bore his honors with a simplicity and a plain pattock of the least-understanding, simply earned. The highest tribute which could be paid to departed worth was accorded to the memory of the hero of the Hunter. Thousands of his fellow-townsmen followed the funeral on its way to the cemetery.
